Desktop systems available in the market come with various configurations. Selecting the right configuration of desktop systems depends on the usage intended to be extracted out of that particular system.

Whether you intend to use them for playing high end graphics computer games, just to browse internet and collect data, high end softwares or just to using the multimedia features to watch a movie or see the pictures of your holidays, each of these usages need different configurations to function smoothly.

CompuBrain™ helps choose the right desktop for your usage guiding you from the configurations you need to the best options available in the desktop range.
