Internet is becoming the most popular tool for marketing. Companies and firms today make maximum use of electronic medium to market their products and grab the attention of their target audience.

To fulfil this they often send mass emails to addresses in their databases, collected or acquired, to advertise and sell their product. This may cause the receiver some hassle and might frustrate him/her having to go through unwanted emails before getting to the important ones. Also causing discomforts are the spam emails which carry unwanted, at times obscene and objectionable content, and even sometimes viruses that could damage your system.

Ask CompuBrain<sup>TM</sup> as to how you can avoid such unwanted and spam emails and make your email experience much easier, secure and free of discomfort.
